Summary (as of Jan 21, 2010)

Supports members of the Armed Forces as they continue to fight the war against terrorists.

Opposes their prosecution when rooted in an excess of political correctness and over-sensitivity.

Expresses the sense of the House of Representatives that any member of the Armed Forces accused of a crime related to the treatment of a suspected terrorist should have any legal fees related to their defense paid for by the U.S. government, if the member is acquitted or the charges are dropped.
