Summary (as of Feb 24, 2010)

Commends the U.S. Army for its achievements in and commitment to environmental sustainability and energy security by exploring advanced technologies and energy-efficient processes and by "building green, buying green, and going green."

Recognizes that energy efficiency is a critical means of increasing the Army's tactical advantage in contingency operations and reducing dependency on fossil fuels.

Encourages the Army to build on such successes and take further steps toward achieving greater environmental sustainability and energy security.
