Command Accountability for Military Family Readiness Act

This bill requires each military department to prioritize military readiness.

Specifically, each department must

- designate the command personnel who shall undergo a climate assessment that takes into account their support of military family readiness;
- provide training, guidance, and other information to ensure that such command personnel are equipped to encourage and support military family readiness within their unit or installation;
- ensure that each assessment includes the extent to which the command personnel encourage and support military family readiness; and
- ensure that each assessment includes surveys of the spouses of service members on matters that are relevant to military spouses, military families, and military family readiness.
